A new amino acid residue-binding site in alpha-amylases. The interaction between alpha-amylases and a new substrate, 2-deoxy-D-arabinose, is studied and the contribution of specific amino acid residues to substrate binding is analyzed. The carboxyl group at position 2 of the substrate binds to Arg-271, an absolutely conserved amino acid residue in alpha-amylases, but the arabinose moiety binds to the same site through electrostatic interactions with the side chains of Arg-67 and Lys-70. In addition, an interaction between the carboxyl group at position 6 of the substrate and Tyr-228 is observed. Dracorhinus is a genus of rodent in the family Cricetidae. The genus has several species, but only one is an invasive species that has become a pest. It is found in the United States, New Zealand, Australia, and New Guinea. Species Species within the genus are: Eastern grey short-tailed bat, Dracorhinus abbreviatus Pearl palm short-tailed bat, Dracorhinus ferrugineus Southern long-tailed myotis, Dracorhinus helios Eastern long-tailed myotis, Dracorhinus novaeguineae Northern long-tailed myotis
