I was using the Serial Number Finder I searched for my serial number but didn't get any result. I even tried searching it on Crackberry.com forums but I didn't get any result. How can I find my serial number on a Samsung S5? A: It's getting more and more difficult to manually search for a serial number with a modern smartphone, and even with devices from a previous generation, it's much less user friendly than it could be. The best place to look for the serial number on your S5 is the Samsung Device Unlock app. The contents of the app are not stored on the device itself, but on the device manufacturer's servers. Therefore, you won't find your serial number by searching your phone, but rather in a server somewhere. You can only search for a serial number that is already online - you can't search for a serial number you have offline somewhere. Some devices like the Galaxy S3 have a file on the device called "Manager" which contains your device information and settings, but it is an Android-specific file and not available on every Android device. If you have an additional Samsung device, you might be able to use it as a way to search for your S5, and if you have a Samsung device with Developer Tools installed, you can search for serial numbers yourself. With these tools, you can find your serial number or even your device IMEI (which is actually a phone number). Here is a direct link to a tutorial on how to do a IMEI scan: Check Here (This is for 3rd party tools, so it might not work for you). With Developer Tools, you can also find the IMEI of the device (and other things like your IMEI like factory, serial number, model, and so on) Check Here (This is for 3rd party tools, so it might not work for you). In the link there is some information about how this can be done with ADB, but it is possible to do it all with a computer and your S5. You might find it easier to do a Google search for your S5 to find articles about how to do it. However, you might have to reboot your phone to make the changes to the IMEI in the Device Unlock app (or the third party apps you used for this) take effect.
