The following is an example of VBA code to generate an Office 2007 file with a help file. For example, you can generate an Office 2007 file with an XML document file, help file, or both. Â . You can create a help file using the Help dialog box. Choose Help in the right-click menu of the VBA editor. The Help menu appears on the VBA editor tool bar. Choose Help for more information. You can also create a help file using a standard XML file. For example, you can use the MIDL tool to generate an XML help file. Choose File and then choose Options to open the Options dialog box. On the View tab, click Customize Current Document to open the Customize Current Document dialog box. To create the XML help file, select the XmlHelpFile option and specify the path to an XML file. A file with.xml is a valid filename. The following code generates a XML help file. If you are using a compiler that does not support the syntax above, you can generate the help file by omitting the XML option and specifying the path to an XML help file, as shown in the following sample code. To create the XML help file, you must specify the path to an XML file. For example, you can use the MIDL tool to generate an XML help file. Is there a difference in meaning between "cover" and "dove" meaning "to hide"? When do we use these words in a sentence? Can you give me some examples? A: The meanings are different, and the differences lie in their possible figurative uses. Dove The standard definition of "dove" is "to seek safety or protection by hiding" and hence "to hide". This can be a figurative use of "cover". For example, a police officer hiding behind a car in a gang fight might be said to have "hidden behind a cover". We also use the word to mean "to conceal a crime" in the expression "cover-up", for example. Cover "Cover" in this sense means "to protect". For example, a soldier might cover or shield someone from the enemy. Also in this sense you might say that "the whole world is covering for him". You might also talk about someone hiding behind a cover on a photographic camera (I'm in the dark for more info!). The difference between "cover" and "dove" in this sense is that "cover" denotes an underlying physical object, and "dove" denotes the action of hiding. There's no physical object for "dove", just the act of hiding. A: No, there is no difference in meaning. This question is hard to answer because it overlaps significantly with other questions here: cover and hidden, the difference between cover and hide, and dovetailing vs nondovetailing. In answer to Cover and Dove, as noted by mtra (and elsewhere), there is no difference in meaning. In general, if a word and its cognates in other languages do not mean the same thing, that is a strong sign that they don't mean the same thing in English. Both cover and dove can be used to hide people and things, but the meaning of the verb itself is not sensitive to whether the object is physical or abstract

The statement, made by Mexican authorities on Wednesday and the DEA in Washington, came after US officials became concerned that a tunnel built under the plaza where Guzman was being held could be the latest in a series of escapes. One of the most notorious drug traffickers in the world, Guzman escaped from a maximum-security prison in July 2001 through a tunnel he had dug from the shower in his cell. In November 2010, Mexican marines captured him, but the drug lord escaped from his bed on July 11, 2014, through a 2.5-meter (8-foot) tunnel. During his current term as the head of the Sinaloa Cartel, Guzman has been recaptured four times, the most recent being in January 2016. Last week, Sinaloa cartel gunmen reportedly killed a man close to Guzman as he had just driven up to a home in the state of Sinaloa. Guzman and the Sinaloa cartel have been waging a war with government forces for years. The powerful cartel has been overshadowed by their rivals, the Jalisco New Generation and Knights Templar cartels, both of which are fighting for control over drug trafficking routes and smuggling billions of dollars in illicit narcotics to the United States. The allegations of engineering a tunnel is the latest in a string of controversies to face Guzman. To face his sentence, in October 2016, he became the first person to ever be extradited to the United States from Mexico. On Monday, the US Bureau of Prisons said Guzman was "not receiving adequate mental health treatment." "He is refusing any further mental health therapy or treatment. Mr. Guzman also is receiving insufficient doses of medication."
